

Ph.D. scholarships. The Department of Politics and Philosophy at La Trobe University in Melbourne is offering two doctoral scholarships in conjunction with the appointment of Rob Wilson as the professor of philosophy. Each scholarship provides an annual stipend of approximately $27 000, plus an international student waiver, for up to four years. Professor Wilson welcomes expressions of interest from students working in the philosophy of mind and cognitive science, the philosophy of biology, the philosophy of social science, philosophy in the schools, or philosophical engagement in public life. Candidates from traditionally under-represented groups and with non-standard backgrounds are especially encouraged to apply or to contact the professor directly. For further details, please see robwilsonphilosophy.com and the full posting at latrobe.edu.au/research/future/costs-scholarships/specialist-scholarships, scrolling to the entries under “ASSC Scholarships”. To proceed with a formal application for admission, go to <http://www.latrobe.edu.au/research/future>. In addition to the material requested there, you should also submit a writing sample of 4000-5000 words with your formal application; you can submit this as an attachment under “Any other documents requested as part of your application”. Review of applications will begin after 31st January, 2018. Further information: (a) living costs: <http://www.latrobe.edu.au/study/life/living/costs>, and (b) visa <http://www.latrobe.edu.au/international/how-to-apply/apply-for-a-visa>.

